Mann Urged for Speaker.

Representative Mann, Republican minority leader, will be put in the field as Republican candidate for speaker.

The Progressives of the house will have a meeting probably April 2, to discuss their policies for the coming extrasession. The states expected to be represented are New York, Kansas, Illinois, Pennsylvania and Washington. The plan now is to select representative Murdock, of Kansas, as the Progressive candidate for speaker and Progressive cloor leader of the house.

The Democrats will hold their caucus to apss the tariff policy and the house organization probably April 7 or 8.

cus.

The senate committee will begin consideration of the complete revision bill as soon as it is passed upon by the Democratic caucus in the house and without waiting for the house to act upon it. The sentiment in both bouses has developed strongly in favor of a single tariff bill, embracing the whole revision instead of a separate bill for each schedule. Should the house adopt this plan, senate leaders declare the tariff bill will be passed quickly in the senate.

Manuel Blanche Alcade, publisher of The New Era, a Mexico City newspaper, generally regarded as the mouthplece of the late president Madero's administration, arrived today with the assertion that he "is in a position to prove" that Madero was stabbed to death and that vice president Suarez was strangled in the palace on the night of February 25 and their bodies taken to the prison in an automobile.

Accompanied by his wife, two smell children and brother, Alcade, fled from Mexico City, Feb. 17, taking an obscure route to Salina Cruz. After reaching the west coast he stayed in seclusion for 12 days.

Another fight came up over Davie's protest against the indefinite postponement of the Hunt county bill, which president funniff dd not want included in the journal. The rules committee, to which the dispute was referred Tuesday, recommended that Davis rewrite his protest and that in its changed form it be admitted to the journal. Davis expressed willingness to agree to this Cunniff, and later Roberts, gave notice that they would reserve the right to protest against the protest.

Two cherished bills of the state tax commission were indefinitely postponed in the senate committee of the whole Wednesday. One was the measure imposing a tax of three mills on each $100 of moneys and negotiable papers or bonds, and the other was to require an affidavit of true consideration with each deed recorded. The affidavit was not to be made public but was to assist the assessor in fixing valuations.

Representative Kelton's resolution commending senator Henry F. Ashurst for the stand he has taken in favor of the government owning its own railway mail cars, caused much discussion and was finally postponed indefinitely.

One unfavorable report was submitted by the county affairs committee on Harrison's bill to require the fencing of all railroad tracks outside cities and towns. Later, however, the members of the committee changed their minds and requested another chance at it. It was returned to their yesterday.

The longest and most involved discussion of the day came up over the Cunniff bill to establish a legislative reference library, with a competent librarian. Davis declared that the bill, was ridiculous and would impose an unnecessary expense of some $7,500 a year on the state. The librarian would be the servant of the legislature, Cunniff said. Before each session he would order supplies and make it much easier for the lewinakers to get under way.

An amendment providing that the librarian should be appointed at each session by the rules committee of the two houses was adopted. The bill was still under discussion when the hands of the clock pointed to five and the committee arose to report.

The anti-tipping bill died fairly easy. There was somewhat of a debate, but it was painfully tame. Bradner, Graham, Irgine, Kerr, Lewis and Murphy voted against indefinite postponement. Things are looking blue for the Linney bill creating a game preserve in Coconino and Navalo counties, for the particular purpose of affording protection to the herd of elk recently imported from Wyoming. It is much the same as the Brooks bounty bill, introduced earlier in the session, and contemplates that bounty claimants shall receive their pelis back uninjured.

These were not the only bills submitted by the code committee yesterday. No. 87, referring to marriages, divorces, annulment of marriage and kindred subjects saw the light of day from the committee room. Another code bill is No. 92, relating to the execution of bonds and undertakings.

Golf Is the Oldest Game In Existence

Fans of Game Which Originated in 1147 Are Increasing Every Season-Free Links Are Advocated for Benefit of Public. By FREDERIC J. HASKIN. -

Golf matters in the United States are chiefly under the control of the United States (are chiefly under the control of the United States Golf association which now numbers 150 clubs. At the annual meeting held in January, the annuancement was made of several minor changes in the rules of the Royal and Ancient club of St. Andrews, Scotland. The former president, Silas H. Strain, of Chicago, visited Great Britain last year and placed the American association in close touch with the rules committee of the ancient organization. The American Golf association recently has opened a sort of a clearing house for the purpose of keeping the clubs in touch with the professional players and also with green keepers who are capable of looking after the conditions of golf courses.

In 1428, James L. of Scotland, issued a royal edict against "gooff," because interest in this bid fair to overcome that of archery, and the archer's skill was deemed necessary for the protection of the country. In the reign of king James VI. in the 18th century, balls were brought from Holland, the game began anew in Scotland, and from that day never has been out of favor with the Highlanders and Lowlanders.

Golf is a game for all the year round. Even upon a comparatively cold day the enthusiastic golfer can manage to keep his blood in active circulation during a brisk run around his course, while upon a warmer day he may take the exercise more leisurely.

Golf. Fans facreasing.

The golf lans' are increasing in number every senson and their interest is becoming quite as keen as that of the baseball "fans." Golf as a game appeals to a larger class of people than any other outdoor sport. It is equally suitable for men and women, both young and old. The individual is dependent absolutely upon his own skill. His chances for winning cannot be spoiled by some one else. A poor pitcher may ruin the chances of the best haseball batter in the world. The tennis player is dependent largely upon the skill of the server, but the golfer has a chance for free, individual achievement. Each player makes his strokes in his own time and his game may be suited entirely to his physical capacity.

Free Links Are Urged.

The healthfulness of golf as an exercise is being recognized by the park commissioners in a number of cities, who are planning public golf grounds which shall be tree to the public. One of the last official recommendations of president Taft was that public golf links be established in the District of Columbis in order that the heaftle Golf Fans Increasing.

Within the past ten years, thousands of men and women have taken up golf and with the establishment of public golf links it is consing to be looked upon entirely as a rich man's game.

Men of Advanced Years Enloy Game.

John D. Rockefeller is probably the richest golf player in the world and his enthusiasm has done much to convert other millionaires of advanced years who have retired from strenuous careers of active business life. Florida is the gathering place of these millionaire golfers, and it is said that at one time last year no less than a billion and a half of dollars were represented by the men assembled upon the golf links of one of the well known resorts. The number of really old men who are applying themselves to golf indicates, as one of them recently said, that the game is "the best remedy in the world for Osieritis." Last November Thomas O. B. Congdon, a retired ship builder of New Jersey, celebrated his 33d birthday by going the rounds of a nine hole course, although the wenther was celd and the course in bad condition. Mr. Congdon did not take up golf until he was 31 years old and he never had been an athlete when young, but he has acoured a skill which makes him a formidable adversary to most of the younger members of his club. He believes that the wonderful expanse of gelf interest in the United States during the past ten years has been of the greatest value in prolonging the usefulness of aged men and predicts that during the next generation it will be less unusual to find centenarians upon the golf course than it is to find octogenerians there now.

Golf is really a Scottish game and, with a few minor exceptions, is played according to the rules and laws of the loyal and Ancient Golf club of St. Royal and Ancient Golf club of St. Andrews, which was founded in 1774. It was played by a few persons in America as far back as colonial times, but was comparatively unknown here until the St. Andrews club opened its links at Yonkers, N. Y., in 1886. In 1890 it was little heard of, but by 1906 it had so spread in popularity that there is no longer a city or town of large size in the country which has not its golf links and there are now hundreds of private golf courses. The president of the Golf club of Paris has asked the president of the American Golf association to have Americans play at La Boulle immediately after the British open at Hoylake, June 19-24. The American organization has endorsed the project and it is expected that it will be one of the most important golf events of the world, difficulty has arisen because of the conflicting dates in America. Unless some of these can be changed, those who go abroad must forsake the American open. As their traveling expenses and a goodly sum besides are insured, the foreign trip already has been accepted by soveral of the professional players and it is probable that some of the American events scheduled will be postponed until September.

Oldest Game in Existence.

Golf is unquestionably the oldest game in existence and many stories are given as to its origin. The principle of striking a ball with a stick for sport existed before the 12th century, for an old receipt is in existence for Ten martells and seven maximum ballenes, which was dated in 1147. These were balls and maliets used in a primitive manner of croquet. It included long drivins, and drives of 200 yards are recorded in ancient times.
